TTAC Response to COVID-19

- We're still here for you – just virtually.

To protect public health in the context of the coronavirus pandemic, we transitioned to web-based trainings in the spring and supplemented pre-planned topics with content to help clinicians and other professionals support families affected by COVID-19. Participation in online trainings has surpassed all expectations, showing that clinicians need and value technical assistance in these trying times.

- We are proud of the Network's flexibility and resilience.

The Network has risen to the challenges of these times to support young children and their families. Each of the Network's seven community-based clinics successfully moved to tele-health modalities – maintaining existing therapeutic relationships with families and even taking new referrals. Clinicians stepped up to stabilize families in crisis and many created resources to help navigate challenges the pandemic presented.

The following webinars were offered by national experts in early childhood mental health and were supplemented by COVID-19 related Resource Documents.
